Explorer → Strategist

Talk to AI. Make it remember.

Two levels in one session

Today we change the words
AND the information

Open Claude on your laptop

Pick a real task from your work

a proposal, an email, a summary, a plan

Or use: "Make me a presentation about making a cup of tea"

Type your natural prompt

Don't overthink it

Assign a Role

One sentence changes everything

Make me a presentation about making tea

You are a senior office manager at a mid-size tech company. Make me a presentation about making tea

Add this to your prompt:

"You are a senior [your role] at [your company]."

Be Specific

Specificity in = specificity out

Make a presentation about making tea

A 10-slide deck for new hires. British-style loose-leaf tea. Cover equipment, steeping time, and milk-first debate.

Add to your prompt:

WHO it's for

WHAT the constraints are

HOW long it should be

One Task at a Time

Structure in = structure out

Make a presentation about tea, cover equipment, technique, preferences, and cleanup

1. Outline the key steps in order
2. Cover equipment needed
3. Walk through the process
4. Note team preferences

Structure your prompt:

Add numbered sections or clear steps

Power Keywords

Words that change AI behaviour

Don't you think tea is great and everyone should learn it?

Be radically honest.
Think step by step.
Challenge my assumptions.

Add 2–3 power keywords:

"Be radically honest."

"Think step by step."

"Challenge my assumptions."

Define the Output

Tell AI exactly what you need

Write something about making tea

Format: billboard slides, max 15 words.
Tone: friendly but practical.
Audience: new hires, zero tea knowledge.

Add to your prompt:

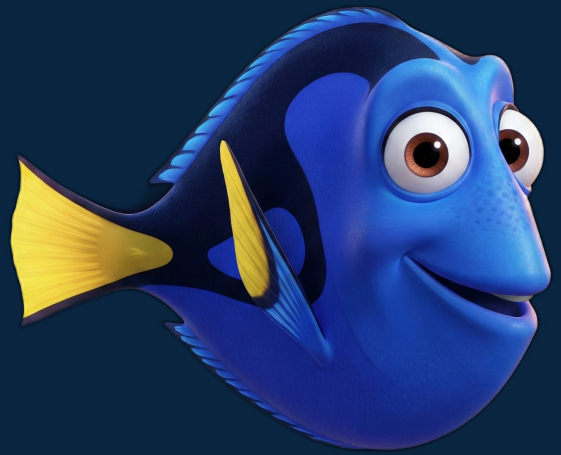
Format, tone, length, and audience

Same task. Same information.
Just better words.

We never changed what the AI knew

Add 3–4 sentences of real context:

Equipment. Tea types. Team preferences. Who's it for.



Brilliant.
Helpful.
Remembers nothing.

Add to your prompt:

"Before you start, ask me clarifying questions about anything you'd need to know."

Next conversation?
You'll type it all again.

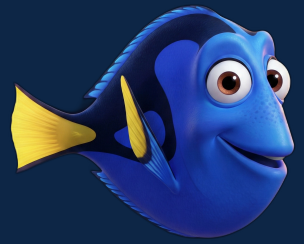
Settings
General
Personal preferences

Write your personal preferences:
"I work at [company]. My role is [role]. Be radically honest. Challenge my assumptions."

Rules

- Billboard design
- British English
- Be concise
- No jargon

Her entire memory.



Skills live in the drawer.
Pulled onto the page
when needed.
Gone when done.

Enable the Presentation skill

Then type: "Make me a presentation about making a cup of tea"

One sentence. It already knows the rest.

The page stays clean. The drawer holds the rest.

Same task. Each one dramatically better.

Vague

Explorer

Well-prompted

Whisperer

Rules + Skills

Strategist

You're now a Strategist

But who's doing all the work? Still you.